Elizabeth Jorn was born in Penang, Malaysia spent her childhood in Singapore and didn't move to her parents's native Ireland until she was a teenager. After graduating from art school she set about travelling, answering the call of her spiritual home, Asia.

She met her Danish partner in life and in art, Jorn Bertram, in the Philipines. Sharing similar aesthetic ideas they worked together as artists for many years until Jorn passed away in 2008. Elizabeth continues to create new Elizabeth Jorn sculptures in her studio in the Thai seaside town of Hua Hin. Elizabeth Jorn works in plaster, wax or clay and then casts the finished piece in bronze. The sculptures are then coloured with a patina or gilded.

Elizabeth Jorn sculptures can be found in private collections worldwide from Europe; Finland, Scandinavia, Germany, France, Holland , Switzerland , Britain, the Channel Isles and Ireland, to America and Asia; India, Singapore, Australia, Japan, and Thailand

Inspiration

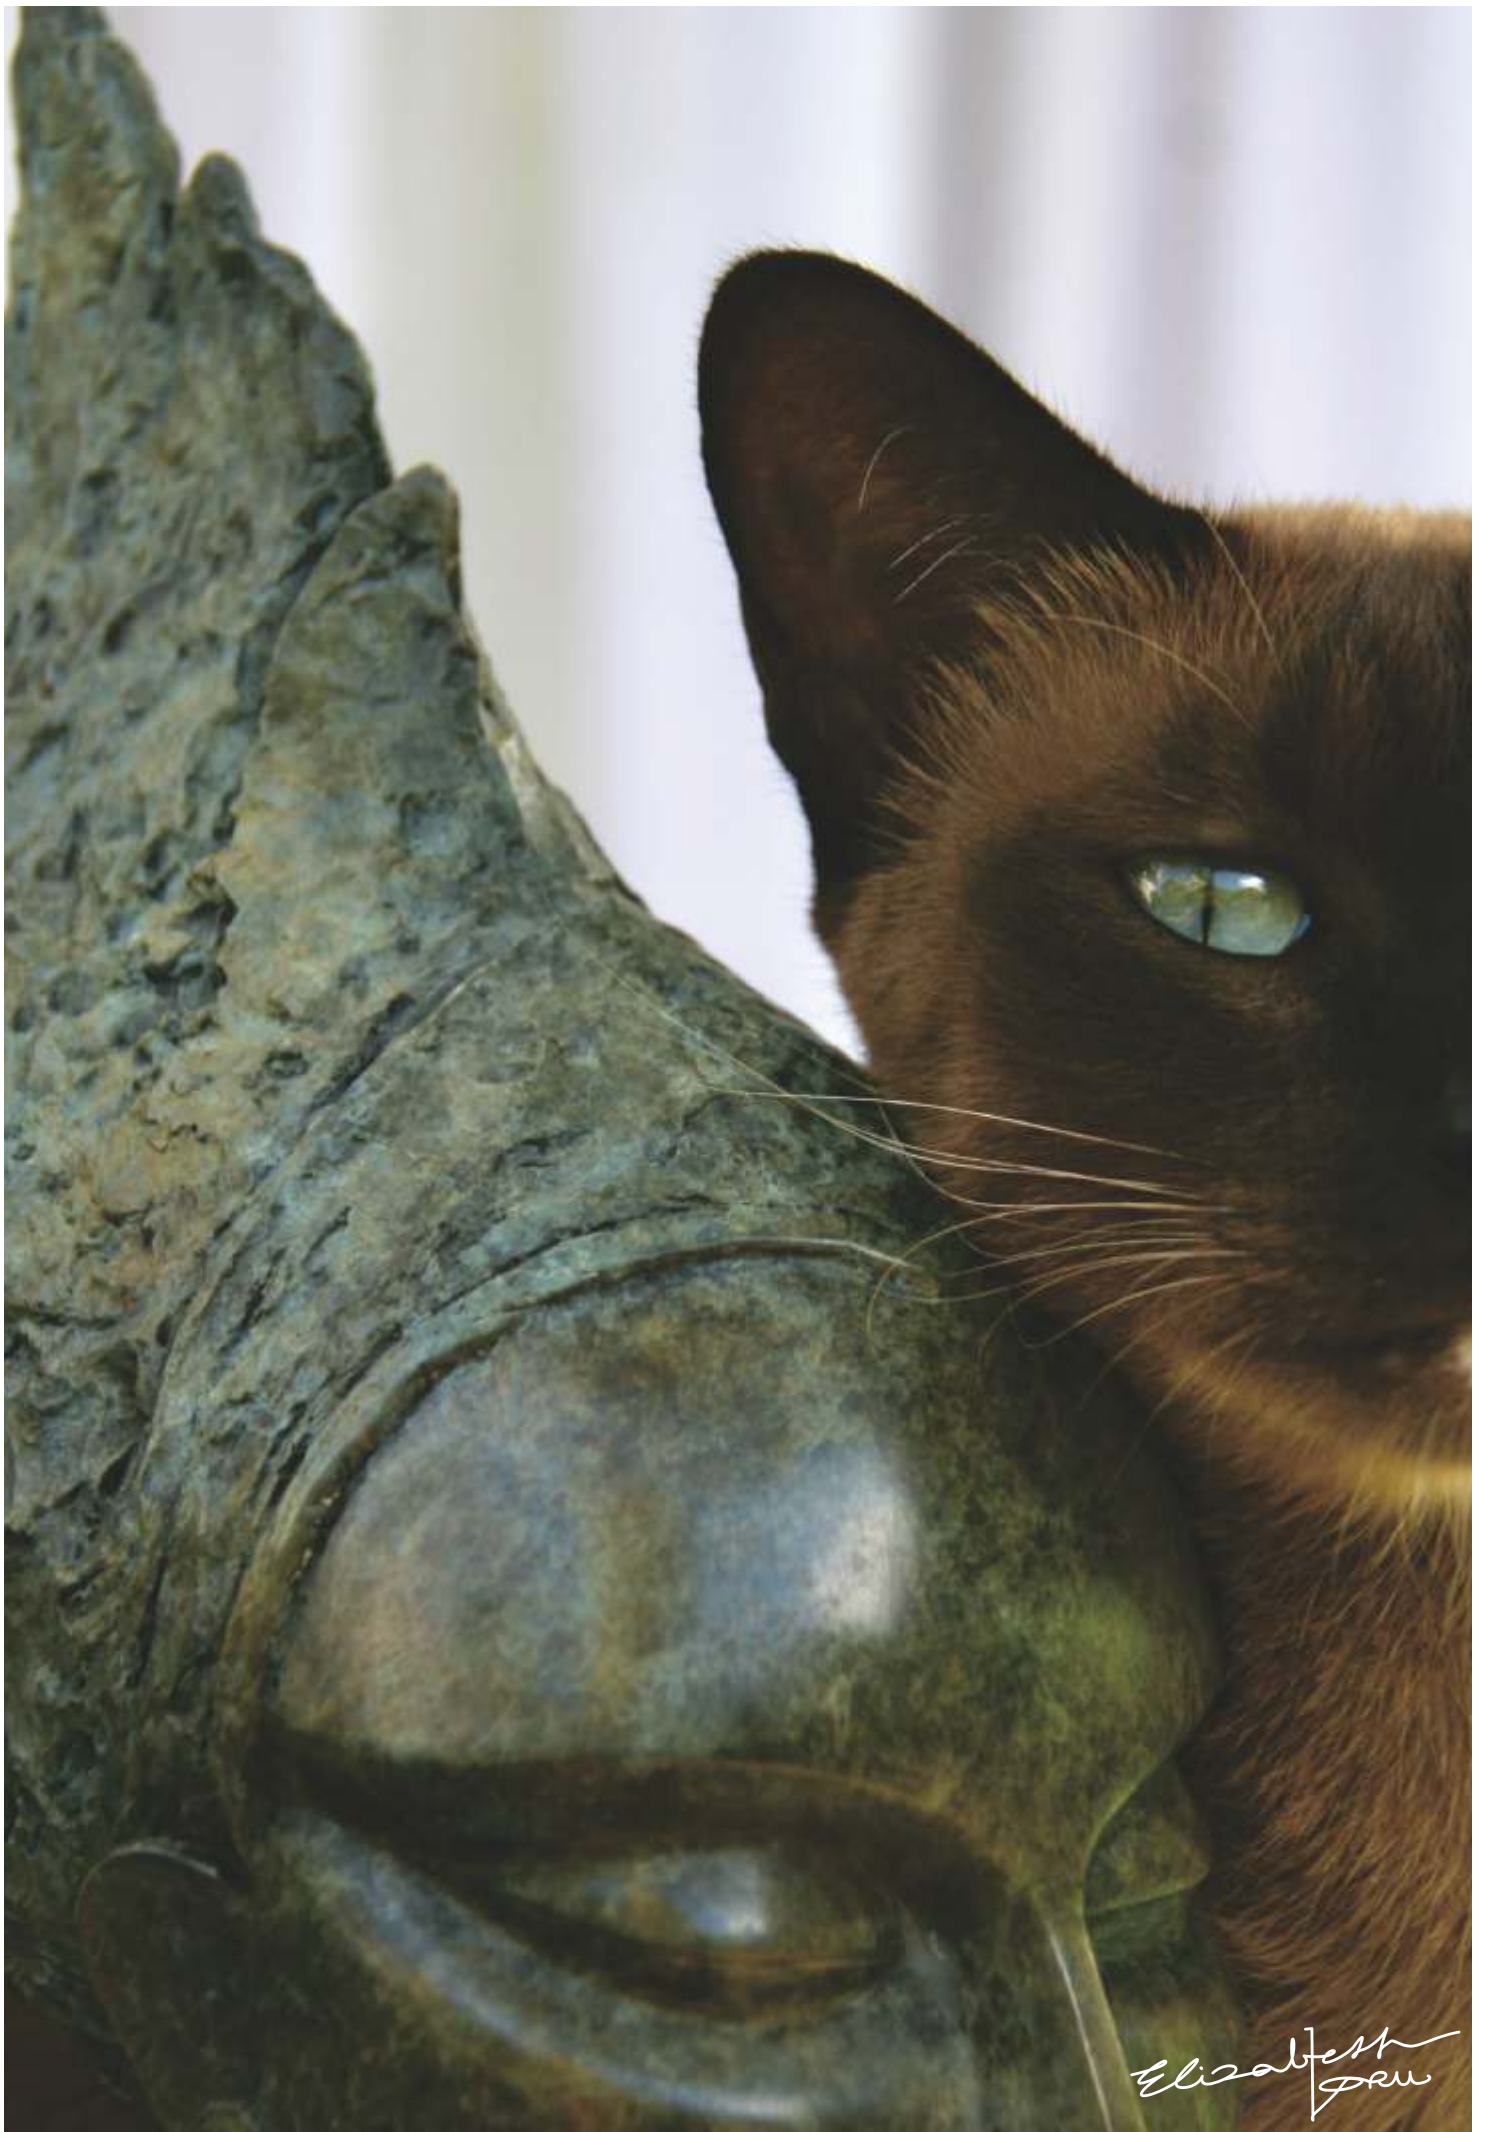

Irish artist Elizabeth Jorn's sensual and contemporary sculptures are invitations to touch, feel and hold. The inspirations for her work are diverse; the reinterpretations of ancient myths, human emotions, a phrase from a book or film and the beauty of nature are all developed into original artwork.

"I think most art is created from an almost desperate bid to savour life and to express either it's great beauty or immense ugliness. I chose to express what I consider beauty although a hair's breadth away lurks a darker side. The duality in most things, the continuity of life and it's interconnectedness fascinates me and I enjoy trying to express it.

The timelessness of old stories and beliefs add colour to life and can still speak to us today linking us to our ancestors and each other in our curiosity and attempts to understand the world".
